The Role of Touch in Dementia Care

Wednesday 27th November 2013

Venue : The Bond, Birmingham

David Sheard introduces Dementia Care Matters new work

Facilitated by Luke Tanner, Dementia Care Therapist

Dementia Care Consultant Trainer in Dementia Care Matters.

'Being with' not just 'doing to' people is key - learn a way to shift from task orientation to 'being' with people

setting the standards for best practice in the use of touch

Learn about how / when to use: expressive touch, touch with repetitive expressions, touch in later stage dementia care, congruent touch, comforting touch, intuitive touch, placing touch in the context of consent.

Physical contact is an essential part of personal care practices and procedures. There has been a lot of misunderstanding in dementia care about what is or is not appropriate use of touch.

This workshop looks more closely at this key aspect of care in order to help staff explore the role touch plays in conveying feelings, developing relationships and promoting well-being.
